

International Baccalaureate Exhibition 2019-2020

Throughout the world-wide pandemic known as Covid-19 Coronavirus, good news is happening every day. As these stories come to light, we can align them to IB trans-disciplinary themes and learner profiles.

Lizzo feeds frontline workers:

The Grammy-winning singer Lizzo wants to make sure those in the thick of it at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania are at least well fed. She sent all the emergency room staff free lunch.

This story represents the trans-disciplinary theme of sharing our planet and the learner profile of caring.

The goal of our exhibition project is to spread the good news through this difficult time. First, you will research and find a news story that you enjoyed reading about the most. You will describe the story and explain why you liked it. Secondly, you will share something you have already done or would like to do that will spread more positive stories in our community. Think about what trans-disciplinary theme and learner profile you are exhibiting.

Part 1: Favorite Story in the News

I read a story about Lizzo who is a famous singer. Lizzo wanted to show her appreciation and gratitude for the nurses and doctors who are working on the front lines fighting to keep people safe. The entire ER staff at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania was delivered food. Lizzo felt feeding the staff was the best way to say thank you for all that they are doing. I enjoyed this story because it happened in Philadelphia, which is where I live. It was nice to see a celebrity do something nice for the workers in my own community. This story along with the others that I read made me feel happy because it is nice to see people come together in a time of need.

Part 2: My Story

As Easter approached my family and I were having a hard time dealing with the fact that we would not be able to see our family. Instead of being sad about it, we decided to make the best out of the situation. We realized our neighbors were most likely feeling sad too and decided to spread a little cheer. With materials we found around the house and a Sam's Club size bag of candy, we filled brown paper bags that we made look like a bunny with candy. We tied a little note to the front of the bag then took a family walk around our neighborhood and left a bunny bag at the front door of each house. We were greeted with my many smiles. Weeks later we even received several thank you notes. It felt great putting a smile on other peoples faces, making a hard time a little easier. Best of all, I think my family started a new Easter tradition.

Part 1: Favorite Story

My favorite story I heard during this pandemic is about people giving out toilet paper and hand sanitizer. I Love Hearing about other people caring for each other and people who provide things that people need in the world. They gave out toilet paper and hand sanitizer because they knew that it was a shortage in the world. They did it for people who had run out or had a shortage of hand sanitizer or toilet paper. Some other people such as Ariana Grande help by donating money to nearby hospitals. Or give away food to hospitals or homeless people.

Part 2: My Story

Recently me and my mom started going to Dunkin ' or starbucks every morning. We always started to see this homeless man outside with barely no clothes, mask or food. He would walk around barefoot everyday and could barely walk because of the condition he was in at the time. So me and my mom went home and called my cousin. He said that he had old clothes and shoes that he was going to throw away. We said no, keep it on our way. We got some outfits and new shoes that the man could wear if he could fit them. We also gave him 20 and two brand new masks. Every day we pass him and give him money he thinks of us like his new friend.
