Approximately 70% of students should recover from their concussion within 4 weeks; however, 30% of students may experience a prolonged recovery. Current research demonstrates high levels of cognitive activity (thinking) following concussion may prolong recovery in students. Therefore, it is important for schools to implement appropriate academic adjustments and progress monitoring upon notification of a student's concussion, to alleviate prolonged concussion recovery. For students who do not recover within that timeframe, schools agree to make an online student referral to their local BrainSTEPS team at www.brainsteps.net.
