Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA)

FERPA (Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act) is a federal law that provides parents of students the right to inspect and review their child’s educational records. Under the provisions of this law, the School District of Philadelphia is required to provide notice of parent rights to parents at the beginning of each school year. The notice is also available in multiple languages.

- Parental rights to inspect and review their child’s educational records
- Opportunity for parents to challenge the content of their child’s educational records
- Preparation and distribution of a school district’s privacy policy

FERPA regulations require schools to notify parents of their rights to inspect and review educational records and to challenge the content of those records. The School District of Philadelphia is committed to ensuring that all parents have access to their child’s educational records and that their rights are protected.

LEAs (Local Educational Agencies)

The School District of Philadelphia is an LEA, which means it is responsible for ensuring that parents have access to their child’s educational records. The School District of Philadelphia is also responsible for providing parents with a copy of the school district’s privacy policy.

Student records include educational records, student evaluations, and other information that pertains to a student’s education. These records may include grades, test scores, and other academic information. The School District of Philadelphia is committed to protecting the privacy of student records and ensuring that they are kept confidential.

FERPA user ID

If you would like to request information about your child’s educational records, you will need to provide your child’s user ID. Your child’s user ID is a unique identifier assigned by the School District of Philadelphia to each student. If you do not know your child’s user ID, you can request it from the School District of Philadelphia.
